

How to learn languages

For me the best way to learn languages is by watching videos, that have language you want to learn. That's how I learned English, at least part of it.

My favorite app is Yt. It's simple to use and it contains a lot of knowledge from different areas and when I need it, I can turn on subtitles. It's really helpful for me, to hear and read at the same time.

You can also learn anywhere: in train or in the bus, because YouTube or some other apps that you prefer are already on your smartphone or you can just use your PC/Laptop.

In this method obviously are some minuses, like these electronic device aren't cheap, but who don't have smartphone in Europe or USA!

Sometimes you may mix two similar languages into one. I mean mix American English with British or Australian and they aren't the same! For example take the English word refrigerator, in America this is fridge or in England you'll say elevator, in America is a lift.

Like with almost every method, you'll have some troubles, but with this one you can do both: learn and relax watching some videos on YouTube, Netflix, or other websites/TV shows that have other language in it.

Playing games is also a thing, that you can learn from. Not as much as in videos, but you can meet other players that are speaking/writing in English. So You can use your knowledge and write them back.

sometimes you can meet there some "silly people" I mean they're writing in they're own native language and it's hard to understand them.

As you can see I'm not very good at English, but I'm still learning.
